What Is Your Baby Thinking?

Have you ever wondered how your child grows? How your baby learns about the world? What and how children think and remember? How they change as they get older and move from one developmental stage to the next? We would like to find out and you and your child can help! You and your children (age newborn-17 years) are invited to participate in engaging and active online and in-person research studies on child development at the Emory Child Study Center, where we study language, learning, memory, and how children understand space and numbers. Since all studies are ONLINE, you may participate from anywhere in the country! Most studies last around one hour (weekend & evening appointments available) and are designed to be like games for the children, to make sure they enjoy their experience. Your child will receive a gift card and is sure to have a good time!

Registering is easy. Visit at <http://psychology.emory.edu/child-study-center/> to sign up under the "How to Participate" link or contact us at childstudies@emory.edu or 404-727-7432
