

Preventing & Managing Diabetes

The Diabetes Prevention Program (DPP)

The Diabetes Prevention Program (DPP) is a one-year, small group program that helps participants learn to eat healthy, increase physical activity, and manage stress to prevent or delay type 2 diabetes. Employees who are eligible must:

- Have a body mass index (BMI) of 25 or greater (Asian Americans: 23 or greater), AND
- Have prediabetes diagnosed by a blood test, OR
- Have history of gestational diabetes, OR
- Screen positive for prediabetes using the American Diabetes Association risk test.

Emory employees can enroll in a current DPP lifestyle change group or place their name on an interest log for future groups. There is no cost to employees. Visit the Healthy Emory Diabetes web page for more information.
